PHANG NGA BAY - KO PANYI

The highlight of Phang Nga province is the Ao Phang Nga National Park consisting of many outstanding islands with different natural scenes. But the most famous one is “Khao Tapu”, which is widely known among tourists as “James Bond Island” due to its location for shooting the James Bond film “The Man with the Golden Gun”. It is now a “world-class destination” to visit.

Another famous island is Ko Panyi highlighted by the only well-known “floating football field”. The floating Muslim community was developed by a group of Muslim people who had once lived on the mainland. They later settled down in a village in the sea by still preserving and conserving their local culture and religious belief, thus making it quiet, tranquil, and simple amidst beautiful nature.
