Secrets of Success Wat Chedi Luang Varavihara

Located in the center of Chiang Mai, this 600-year-old temple was named after the city's largest Buddhist chedi, Chedi Luang. The original chedi was finished in 1481 during King Mengrai's reign. The current Chedi Luang is a reconstruction of this original structure, which was demolished in 1545 due to an earthquake. The temple holds several sacred treasures, including the enormous reclining Buddha "Pra Chao Som Pradthana" and a revered standing Buddha statue, Phra Chao Attarot. The biggest attraction for businesses and celebrities is "San Thao Kumpan (Kumbhanda Shrine)," which houses two Kumbhandas thought to bestow success in business and endow blissful love.

True Love is only a wish away! Wat Lok Moli

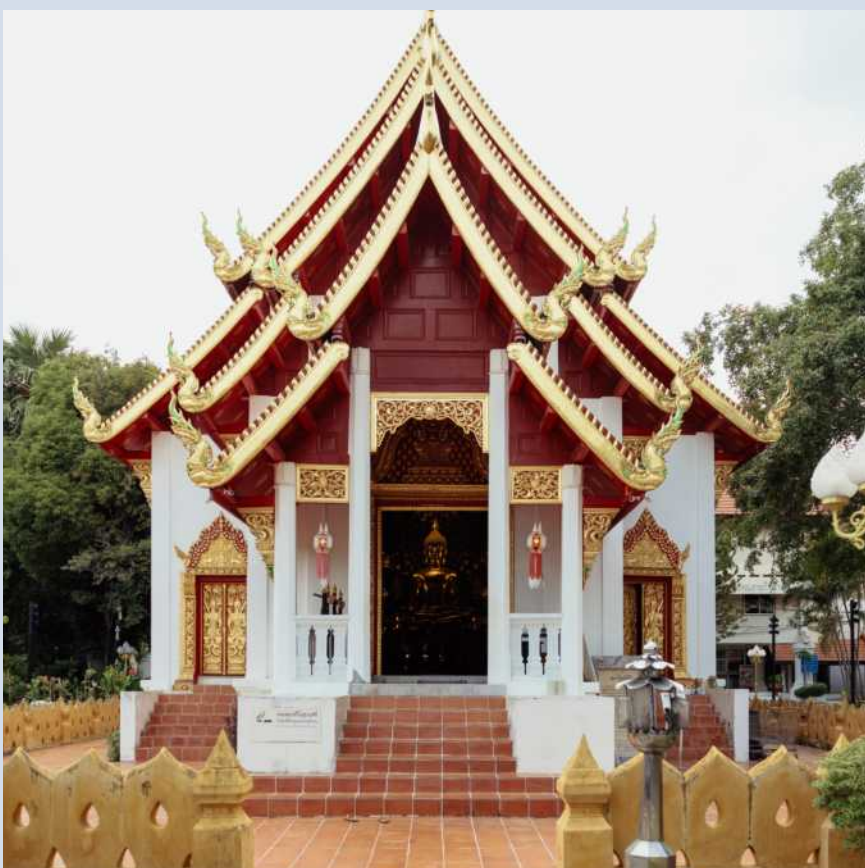

The ancient temple Wat Lok Moli houses one of the most impressive chedis in Chiang Mai. The massive chedi contains the ashes of many kings of the Mengrai dynasty that governed the Lanna Kingdom from the late 13th century until 1558. The temple became well-known among the younger generation as a mystical location to pray for true love. They gather around the Pra Nang Chiraprapha Maha Thevi (Queen Chiraprapha) statue, who was also known as the Goddess of Love by young believers and pray for true love. But your desire must be heartfelt as it's believed that only requests from those who genuinely want to discover their true love will be granted.

Embrace the Divine Vibes Wat Pa Dad

Wat Pa Dad is often crowded with visitors who come to worship the elephant-headed Hindu god Ganesha, the god of success. Uttara Sri Ganapati is the name given to this statue, which means Ganesha, "who bestows success in the North". The blackened bronze Ganesha statue has four arms holding a Vajra, a noose, a broken tusk, and a bowl of his favorite dessert. A Brahmin would perform Arti, a Hindu ritual in which light, (typically from a flame), is waved in the air for the respect of deities.

Visit devarajkunchon temple... When you need luck in a hurry Wat devarajkunchon

Believers in desperate need of an instant wish result flock to Thep Thanjai, (or Devaraj Neramit), the deity that grants wishes quickly, particularly requests concerning job, money, study, and good fortune. But you only get ONE wish! To send your "Direct Message (DM)" to the deity, carefully roll two banknotes together before placing them in the deity's hand, make your wish and then touch your forehead gently to Thep Thanjai's pointing finger. When that's done, place one of the two banknotes in the donation box. Imprint the Devaraj Neramit talisman stamp on the remaining banknote and keep it with you for good luck.

Pray for Success Luang Pho Samret Buddha

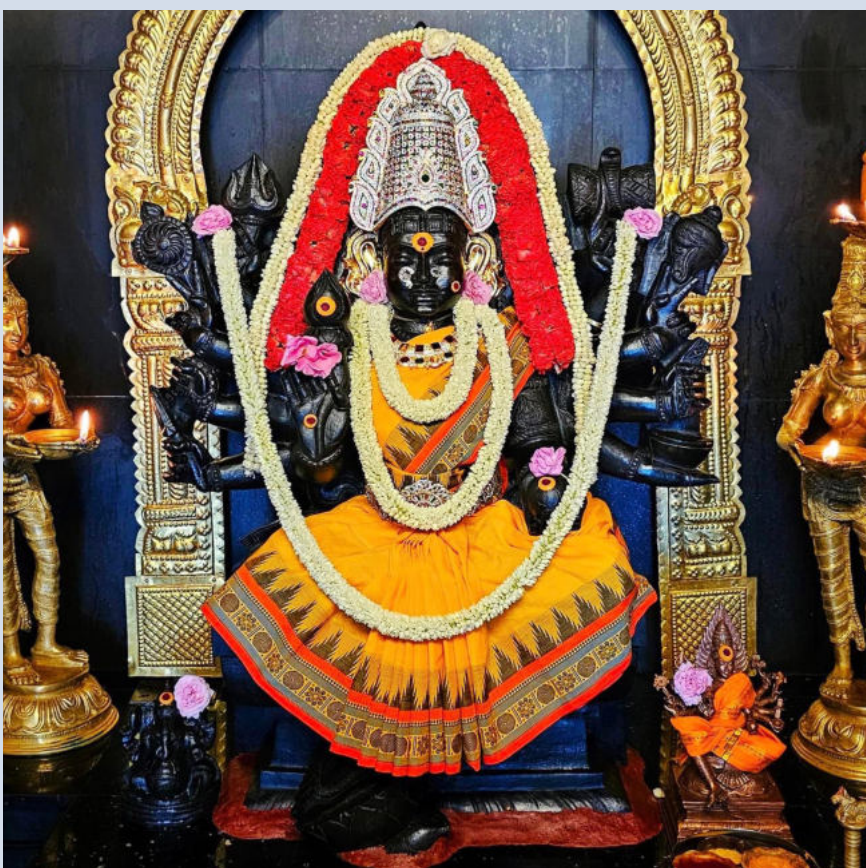

This seated Buddha in the subduing Mara position is everyone's favorite because of its auspicious name, "samret" – "success" in English. Locals in Saraburi, visitors from nearby provinces, and celebrities continue to visit the Buddha and pray for a prosperous life. If their wishes are granted, they return to the spiritual site with hard-boiled eggs to please Luang Pho Samret Buddha. The revered Buddha sculpture isn't in a temple. Visitors can find Luang Pho Samret Buddha in the Vihara on the Rapeephat Canal's bank, where it was discovered.

- 🕒 Open Every day 08.00 AM - 04.30 PM

The Magnificent Five Wat Khao Phrom Sawan

One of the most beautiful temples in Saraburi, Wat Khao Phrom Sawan, is situated on the top of the mountain. The temple goes by several names, such as "Wat Soi Hok Khwa" and "Wat Rakhang Khwam," but it is best recognized for enshrining the sculptures of the Five Buddhas. To reach the hilltop, the visitors will have to negotiate the 189 steps of the Naga stairway, but it's worth the effort for the stunning views and the opportunity to pray before the five great Buddhas.

- 🕒 Open Every day 08.00 AM - 05.00 PM
(Public holidays close at 8:00 p.m.)

The Spiritual Path Wat Phra Phutthabat

Wat Phra Phutthabat, a holy pilgrimage destination since the Ayutthaya period, is one of Thai Buddhism’s most sacred locations. Each year pilgrims and merit-makers from all corners of Thailand flock to the temple to put a piece of gold leaf on the Buddha’s footprint. The footprint found stamped on a stone slab is the holiest one as it features the 108 auspicious signs of the Buddha on the sole. Some people believe that paying homage to the footprint of Buddha will bring them great blessings in life.

Pray to Si Prachan's Buddha for Protection and Good Fortune Wat Pang Muang

The historic temple of Wat Pang Muang is one of the spiritual landmarks with mystical stories. The temple houses, the 700-year-old Phra Phuttasophit Buddha, which was relocated from Bangkok during World War II. Wat Liab, the previous temple where the Buddha was enshrined and destroyed during the war. However, legend has it - the Buddha sculpture was left without a scratch before being relocated to Wat Pang Muang. This led to the start of the belief among many people that the Buddha has the power to ward off dangers and also bring a worshiper good luck. Aside from the protection Buddha, Wat Pang Muang is well-known for the sculpture of Thao Wessuwan (the Giant King). Believers pray to the Lord of Ghosts to transform their unfavorable year (gae chong) into one filled with good fortune.

Wish for Good Luck and Wealth Wat Khae

Wat Khae, a 500-year-old temple nestled in the Tha Chin River, is where fact and fiction, natural and supernatural, are intertwined. The legendary temple appeared in the famous folktale "Khun Chang Khun Phaen." The massive tamarind tree still stands on the temple grounds, while sculptures of Khun Phaen and Luang Pu Khong, (sitting on a giant hornet), entice tourists seeking a touch of magic. Many believe that walking underneath the statue of the giant hornet will bring them good luck and wealth, while others come to pray for love, expecting that the charming Khun Phaen will assist them in their quest.

Cliff of Dharma Wat Khao Tham Thiam,

The Wat Khao Tham Thiam temple, with its Big seated Buddha, or “Luang Phor U Thong,” has evolved from an abundant mine to a garbage dump, and now to a spiritual refuge. The temple recently became a favorite spiritual site for government officials who believe the Buddha may help advance them in their careers. The next spiritual spot to check out is the sculpture of Phra Mae Thorani (Goddess of Earth and Water) located inside the cave. Some visitors to the sculpture bring a THB10 coin and make a wish before standing the coin on its edge, believing that the faster they complete the task, the sooner their wish will come true.

A Good Deed Is the Best Prayer Pu U Lue Shrine

All Naga worshipers are familiar with Pu U Lue Naga (Grandfather U Lue), the guardian of a treasure trove who can bestow wealth on his followers. Bribing your way into his favor is not suggested since Pu U Lue values actions above riches or favor. Show goodness in mind and deeds and Pu U Lue may grant your wish. Only one wish will be fulfilled, so think twice before making one. Most visitors stop by Pu U Lue Shrine after visiting Naga Cave. However, many devotees come straight to the shrine.

Pray to the Golden Face Buddha Wat Pa Muang Hueang (Wat Sri Bun Reung)

Wat Pa Muang Hueang, the oldest temple in Bueng Kan, was built during the reign of the Khmer Empire. The golden Ubosot, (ordination hall), is notable for being decorated with various naga sculptures. Locals pay respect to the statues of Pu Sri Suddho (Grandfather Sri Suddho) and Ya Sri Prathum (Grandmother Sri Prathum), the Naga king and Queen, while in front of the Ubosot. The temple houses “Pra Buddha Naga Nimit,” a black Buddha statue with a golden face. This was an offering from a businessman who promised this gift to the Naga if his business succeeded. He fulfilled his vow to the Naga after he received his wish.

The Legend Lives On Wat Huay Hin Haep, Bueng Khong Long District

Wat Huay Hin Haep became famous after locals discovered a Naga-like stone in the stream between the cracks of the hill. The sun-cracked stone and bumps resemble the head of a huge serpent, similar to the one in the Naga Cave. The legend of Wat Huay Hin Haep’s Bathing Naga became viral, bringing Naga devotees to the temple. According to local legend, the temple also holds a statue of “Praya Sri Suddho Naga,” the Naga King who built the Mekong River to settle an argument with his friend Praya Sri Satta Naga. Naga devotees pray to the Naga King for a quick granting of their wishes.

The 4 Pillars of Life The New Town City Pillar Shrine (Mae Juang)

The city pillar has a long association with the city's guardian spirit. Locals always pay their respects to this city pillar and pray for success at work, career advancement, and power. The city is now constructing a new shrine, while the old one remains open for villagers to pay their respects to the guardian spirit.

- 🕒 Open 24 hours
- 📍 229 Soi Lakmuang, Thep Krasatti, Thalang District, Phuket 83110

Thalang Pasak City Pillar Shrine (Mae Soy Kaew)

Those entering a competition visit this city pillar to ask for success or accomplishment. Business owners, entrepreneurs, and newcomers to Phuket would pray for a smooth start, thriving business, and successful investment.

- 📍 Choeng Thale, Thalang District, Phuket 83110

3. Lay Pang City Pillar Shrine (Chao Mae Kesinee)

Initially created to protect the village from marine disasters, most people today visit the shrine to pray for wealth and good fortune. Worshipers can ask the guardian spirit for anything they want as long as they follow two simple house rules. The first is that you can only make one wish on each trip. The second is that it is completely for bidden to promise any specific offering to the deity for granting your wish

- 📍 Choeng Thale, Thalang District, Phuket 83110

4. Tharue City Pillar Shrine (Chao Mae Yai Duang)

Tharue City Pillar Shrine is believed to be the oldest of the four city pillar shrines. It is unique since it also houses a one-seat boat. This shrine, located near the Thao Thep Krasatri and Thao Si Sunthon monument, is famous among singletons and couples wishing to have a son.

- 📍 Choeng Thale, Thalang District, Phuket 83110

A Gift From Heaven Pud Jor Shrine

The century-old Pud Jor Shrine is a spiritual landmark for Chinese descendants in Phuket. This shrine is dedicated to Guanyin, the Chinese goddess of mercy. Couples who want a child will go to the shrine and pray to the goddess for a successful pregnancy. Many people pray for a cure for their illnesses by practicing Siem Si or Kau Chim, a Chinese fortune-telling. The text or numerals on the stick of Siem Si corresponds to one of the shrine's written oracles.

The Soul of Nora, the Soul of Southern Thailand. Wat Phu Khaothong

Wat Phu Khaothong, with its 1,300-year-old reclining Buddha, is a Thailand cultural landmark. The graceful reclining Buddha statue is astonishingly beautiful with Serd, a Manora headdress, making it a unique Buddha in Thailand. The ancient temple has long been a pilgrimage site for Manora dancers, who perform a series of ritual dances before the Buddha during the Songkran Festival. Recently, the Buddha has begun to attract those who work in the creative field to Wat Phu Khaothong, believing that the Buddha wearing the Manora headdress will grant all wishes sought by artists.

Merciful Mother of the City Trang City Pillar

Trang City Pillar began as a spiritual center for the locals long before becoming a popular, must-see destination for spiritual travellers. Unlike other city pillars in Thailand, which are all protected by male guardian spirits, Trang City Pillar has a female guardian spirit, or “Chao Mae Lak Mueang.” Couples who are planning a family, flock to the Trang City Pillar to make wishes for a successful pregnancy. Apart from couples, people from all walks of life also come to pray for the deity’s assistance in everything from abundant rain to successful careers to good fortune.

Pray for Justice, Bao Gong Shrine

Fans of the "Justice Bao" TV series and those seeking spiritual justice should not pass up the opportunity to visit the Bao Gong Shrine, Thailand's sole Bao Qing Tian Shrine. Inspired by the legendary and original Kaifeng Court in Henan, China, the Bao Gong Shrine of Trang attracts visitors who have been victims of injustice or mistreatment by others. Believers kneel before the Bao Qingtian sculpture, praying for justice, prosperity, and other blessings.

Staring Contest Game with a Goddess Keng Chio Hoi Kuan Shrine (Chao Mae Tuptim Shrine)

The 180-year-old carved statue of Mazu, the Chinese Sea Goddess, (known as Chao Mae Tuptim to Thais), is housed in the old Hainan shrine Keng Chio Hoi Kuan. Locals believe that if you ask the goddess to grant your wishes, you must stare at her while stating your wish, and your wish will be granted if, and only if, the goddess blinks her eyes! Worshipers pray to Mazu for safe travel and prosperity in business.
